KEEP YOUR CARD SAFE

Although it is not generally necessary at this time for vaccinated individuals to show their COVID-19 vaccination card in public, it's important that those individuals keep their card on hand and safe just in case it may be required for certain activities in the future. It is possible vaccine cards may be required for flying, attending classes, or for entering the workplace and other businesses.

OVERVIEW OF VACCINE CARDS:

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), after receiving a COVID-19 vaccine, you should be given a vaccine card. A vaccine card lists which vaccine was given, how many doses, the date(s) received, and where it was administered.

As vaccine cards may potentially be needed both in the workplace and for activities outside of work, it's important that you keep your vaccine card safe.

Steps to keep your card safe:

- 1. Store it in a safe place
- 2. Take a photo of the card – ideally on a phone so you have an electronic record
- 3. Consider using a protective sleeve

STEPS YOU CAN TAKE IF YOU DIDN'T RECEIVE A CARD OR LOST IT:

According to the CDC, if you have lost or never received your COVID-19 vaccine card, the first action you should take is to contact your vaccination provider site directly to find out how you can get a card.

If you are unable to contact the vaccination provider directly, other options include:

- Contacting your state health department's immunization information system (IIS). They can find state IIS information on the CDC's website. Vaccination providers are required to report COVID-19 vaccinations to the state IIS and related systems.
- If enrolled in v-safe or VaxText after your first vaccine dose, you can access your vaccination information using these tools.

If you have made every effort to locate your vaccination card and are still unable to get a copy or replacement, you should contact a vaccination provider for more information.
